

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
SOUTHERN DIVISION

NATHAN LEE CAUDILL,

Plaintiff,

Case No. 1:24-cv-183

v.

Honorable Sally J. Berens

UNKNOWN MORROW et al.,

Defendants.

This is a civil rights action brought by a state prisoner under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The Court has granted Plaintiff leave to proceed in forma pauperis in a separate order. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c) and Rule 73 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Plaintiff consented to proceed in all matters in this action under the jurisdiction of a United States magistrate judge. (ECF No. 1, PageID.6.)

This case is presently before the Court for preliminary review under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, Pub. L. No. 104-134, 110 Stat. 1321 (1996) (PLRA), pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915(e)(2) and 1915A(b), and 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c). The Court is required to conduct this initial review prior to the service of the complaint. See In re Prison Litig. Reform Act, 105 F.3d 1131, 1131, 1134 (6th Cir. 1997); McGore v. Wrigglesworth, 114 F.3d 601, 604–05 (6th Cir. 1997).

Service of the complaint on the named defendants is of particular significance in defining a putative defendant’s relationship to the proceedings. “An individual or entity named as a defendant is not obliged to engage in litigation unless notified of the action, and brought under a court’s authority, by formal process.” Murphy Bros., Inc. v. Michetti Pipe Stringing, Inc., 526 U.S.

344, 347 (1999). “Service of process, under longstanding tradition in our system of justice, is fundamental to any procedural imposition on a named defendant.” Id. at 350. “[O]ne becomes a party officially, and is required to take action in that capacity, only upon service of a summons or other authority-asserting measure stating the time within which the party served must appear and defend.” Id. (citations omitted). That is, “[u]nless a named defendant agrees to waive service, the summons continues to function as the sine qua non directing an individual or entity to participate in a civil action or forgo procedural or substantive rights.” Id. at 351. Therefore, the PLRA, by requiring courts to review and even resolve a plaintiff’s claims before service, creates a circumstance where there may only be one party to the proceeding—the plaintiff—at the district court level and on appeal. See, e.g., Conway v. Fayette Cnty. Gov’t, 212 F. App’x 418 (6th Cir. 2007) (“Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1915A, the district court screened the complaint and dismissed it without prejudice before service was made upon any of the defendants . . . [such that] . . . only [the plaintiff] [wa]s a party to this appeal.”).

Here, Plaintiff has consented to a United States magistrate judge conducting all proceedings in this case under 28 U.S.C. § 636(c). That statute provides that “[u]pon the consent of the parties, a full-time United States magistrate judge . . . may conduct any or all proceedings . . . and order the entry of judgment in the case” 28 U.S.C. § 636(c). Because the named Defendants have not yet been served, the undersigned concludes that they are not presently parties whose consent is required to permit the undersigned to conduct a preliminary review under the PLRA, in the same way they are not parties who will be served with or given notice of this opinion. See Neals v. Norwood, 59 F.3d 530, 532 (5th Cir. 1995) (“The record does not contain a consent from the defendants[; h]owever, because they had not been served, they were not parties to this action at the time the magistrate entered judgment.”).¹

Under the PLRA, the Court is required to dismiss any prisoner action brought under federal law if the complaint is frivolous, malicious, fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, or seeks monetary relief from a defendant immune from such relief. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915(e)(2), 1915A; 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c). The Court must read Plaintiff’s pro se complaint indulgently, see Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520 (1972), and accept Plaintiff’s allegations as true, unless they are clearly irrational or wholly incredible. Denton v. Hernandez, 504 U.S. 25, 33 (1992). Applying these standards, the Court will dismiss Plaintiff’s complaint for failure to state a claim.

Discussion

I. Factual Allegations

Plaintiff is presently incarcerated with the Michigan Department of Corrections (MDOC) at the Carson City Correctional Facility (DRF) in Carson City, Montcalm County, Michigan. The events about which he complains occurred at that facility. Plaintiff sues the following DRF personnel: Assistant Deputy Warden Unknown Nevins, Officer Unknown Morrow, and Unknown Medical Provider.

Plaintiff alleges that on December 15, 2023, he was on non-bond status. (Compl., ECF No. 1, PageID.3.) Plaintiff’s cell door opened, and he got up to go see what the unit officer wanted.

(Id.) Plaintiff avers that he was halfway through the door when it started to close. (Id.) Before Plaintiff could get all the way into the cell, the door shut on his right and hand fingers. (Id.) Plaintiff's cellmate and other inmates "started screaming to alert the officers at the control panel that they had shut [Plaintiff's] hand and fingers in the door." (Id.)

Plaintiff claims that after "what seemed like a very long 2-4 minutes the door was opened." (Id.) Plaintiff told the officers he needed medical attention. (Id.) Defendant Morrow started making comments about how Plaintiff should not have been in the door and that it was Plaintiff's fault. (Id.) Plaintiff responded that Defendant Morrow "shouldn't have been playin[g] with the doors [because] they are not toys." (Id.) Defendant Morrow looked at Plaintiff's hand, and officers got Plaintiff a pass to go to the medical department. (Id.)

When Plaintiff arrived at medical, staff put a splint on his hand and arm and gave Plaintiff some Tylenol. (Id.) They also gave him an ice detail. (Id.) When Plaintiff got back to his housing unit, he spoke to the sergeant on duty about the incident and asked for grievance forms. (Id.) Plaintiff filed a grievance against the medical staff, claiming that "they didn't seem to take [his] injuries seriously and no X-ray was done." (Id.) Plaintiff also filed a grievance against Defendant Morrow for shutting Plaintiff's hand in the door. (Id.) Defendant Nevins rejected the grievance against Defendant Morrow "for not attempting to resolve." (Id.)

About a week and a half later, Plaintiff was called back to the medical department and received an X-ray. (Id., PageID.4.) He avers that the X-ray showed no break or fracture in his hand. (Id.) Plaintiff claims that he had been experiencing issues with his hand since before the incident due to a cyst in his "thumb and knuckle area," and that having his hand shut in the door just made it worse. (Id.)

A couple weeks after receiving the X-ray, Plaintiff was called back to medical. (Id.) “[T]hey took [his] splint but gave [him] more Tylenol and an ace bandage because [of] the swelling and discoloration.” (Id.) Plaintiff claims that he “lost 75% to 80% of the strength in [his] hand and ha[s] been requesting to be seen by a neurologist because [he is] pretty sure [he has] nerve damage.” (Id.) Plaintiff constantly wrote to medical about the pain and swelling. (Id.)

Eventually, Plaintiff was called back to medical, where a nurse said that Plaintiff could keep his ace bandage because the nurse could “visibly see the swelling and could tell [Plaintiff] was having a lot of problems with the hand.” (Id.) A few weeks later, Plaintiff submitted a kite about the “swelling and the constant throbbing and pain and the numbness in some areas.” (Id.) When he was called to medical, the nurse that saw Plaintiff told him that “she could tell there was something definitely wrong with [Plaintiff’s] hand and said she was [going to] try and get [Plaintiff] into another X-ray.” (Id.) Plaintiff contends, however, that nothing further has been done. (Id., PageID.5.)

Based on the foregoing, Plaintiff asserts the following claims for relief: (1) an Eighth Amendment excessive force claim against Defendant Morrow; (2) an Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference to medical needs claim against the unknown provider; and (3) a First Amendment retaliation claim against Defendant Nevins. (Id., PageID.6.) The Court also construes Plaintiff’s complaint to assert claims against Defendant Nevins premised upon his handling of Plaintiff’s grievances. Plaintiff seeks declaratory relief, as well as compensatory and punitive damages. (Id.)

II. Failure to State a Claim

A complaint may be dismissed for failure to state a claim if it fails “to give the defendant fair notice of what the . . . claim is and the grounds upon which it rests.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007) (quoting Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47 (1957)). While a complaint need not contain detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff's allegations must include more than labels and conclusions. Id.; Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (“Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice.”). The court must determine whether the complaint contains “enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570. “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679. Although the plausibility standard is not equivalent to a “‘probability requirement,’ . . . it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id. at 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). “[W]here the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged—but it has not ‘show[n]’—that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Id. at 679 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2)); see also Hill v. Lappin, 630 F.3d 468, 470–71 (6th Cir. 2010) (holding that the Twombly/Iqbal plausibility standard applies to dismissals of prisoner cases on initial review under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915A(b)(1) and 1915(e)(2)(B)(ii)).

To state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege the violation of a right secured by the federal Constitution or laws and must show that the deprivation was committed by a person acting under color of state law. West v. Atkins, 487 U.S. 42, 48 (1988); Street v. Corr. Corp. of Am., 102 F.3d 810, 814 (6th Cir. 1996). Because § 1983 is a method for vindicating federal rights, not a source of substantive rights itself, the first step in an action under § 1983 is to identify the specific constitutional right allegedly infringed. Albright v. Oliver, 510 U.S. 266, 271 (1994).

A. Claims against Defendant Nevins

1. Retaliation

Plaintiff contends that Defendant Nevins violated his First Amendment rights by retaliating against him. It appears that Plaintiff believes Defendant Nevins retaliated against him for filing grievances by denying or rejecting his grievance against Defendant Morrow.

In order to set forth a First Amendment retaliation claim, a plaintiff must establish three elements: (1) he was engaged in protected conduct; (2) an adverse action was taken against him that would deter a person of ordinary firmness from engaging in that conduct; and (3) the adverse action was motivated, at least in part, by the protected conduct. See Thaddeus-X v. Blatter, 175 F.3d 378, 394 (6th Cir. 1999) (en banc). Moreover, a plaintiff must be able to prove that the exercise of the protected right was a substantial or motivating factor in the defendant's alleged retaliatory conduct. See Smith v. Campbell, 250 F.3d 1032, 1037 (6th Cir. 2001) (citing Mount Healthy City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, 429 U.S. 274, 287 (1977)).

It is well recognized that “retaliation” is easy to allege and that it can seldom be demonstrated by direct evidence. See Harbin-Bey v. Rutter, 420 F.3d 571, 580 (6th Cir. 2005); Murphy v. Lane, 833 F.2d 106, 108 (7th Cir. 1987). “[A]lleging merely the ultimate fact of retaliation is insufficient.” Murphy, 833 F.2d at 108. “[C]onclusory allegations of retaliatory motive ‘unsupported by material facts will not be sufficient to state . . . a claim under § 1983.’” Harbin-Bey, 420 F.3d at 580 (quoting Gutierrez v. Lynch, 826 F.2d 1534, 1538–39 (6th Cir. 1987)); see also Murray v. Unknown Evert, 84 F. App’x 553, 556 (6th Cir. 2003) (discussing that in complaints screened pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1915A, “[c]onclusory allegations of retaliatory motive with no concrete and relevant particulars fail to raise a genuine issue of fact for trial” (internal quotations omitted)); Lewis v. Jarvie, 20 F. App’x 457, 459 (6th Cir. 2001) (holding that “bare allegations of malice on the defendants’ parts are not enough to establish retaliation claims” that will survive § 1915A screening (citing Crawford-El v. Britton, 523 U.S. 574, 588 (1998))).

By filing grievances about the December 15, 2023, incident, Plaintiff engaged in protected conduct. See Smith, 250 F.3d at 1037; Herron v. Harrison, 203 F.3d 410, 415 (6th Cir. 2000). To establish the second element of a retaliation claim, a prisoner-plaintiff must show adverse action by a prison official sufficient to deter a person of ordinary firmness from exercising his constitutional rights. Thaddeus-X, 175 F.3d at 396. The adverseness inquiry is an objective one and does not depend on how a particular plaintiff reacted. The relevant question is whether the defendant’s conduct is “capable of deterring a person of ordinary firmness”; the plaintiff need not show actual deterrence. Bell v. Johnson, 308 F.3d 594, 606 (6th Cir. 2002).

Plaintiff fails to allege facts demonstrating that Defendant Nevins took adverse action against him. Many courts, including this one, have held that the refusal to process or uphold a grievance is not an adverse action. See, e.g., Cameron v. Gurnoe, No. 2:19-cv-71, 2019 WL 2281333, at *4–5 (W.D. Mich. May 29, 2019) (citing cases); Branch v. Houtz, No. 1:16-cv-77, 2016 WL 737779, at *6 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 25, 2016); Ross v. Westchester Cnty. Jail, No. 10 Civ. 3937 (DLC), 2012 WL 86467, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 11, 2012) (discussing that the refusal to file a grievance is, without more, insufficient to constitute an adverse action); Stone v. Curtin, No. 1:11-cv-820, 2011 WL 3879505, at *4 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 31, 2011) (holding that the failure to process a prison grievance would not deter a prisoner of ordinary firmness from exercising his right to file a grievance); Burgos v. Canino, 641 F. Supp. 2d 443, 454 (E.D. Pa. 2009), aff’d, 358 F. App’x 302 (3d Cir. 2009) (finding that the rejection or denial of prison grievances does constitute an adverse action for purposes of a retaliation claim). Refusing to uphold a grievance could not deter a person of ordinary firmness from engaging in protected conduct because it does not have any adverse consequences.

Moreover, Plaintiff fails to allege any facts suggesting that Defendant Nevins's decision to deny the grievance was motivated by Plaintiff's protected conduct. Rather, Plaintiff merely alleges the ultimate fact of retaliation; he sets forth no facts to suggest that Defendant Nevins denied the grievance solely because Plaintiff filed it. Plaintiff's factual allegations are simply too vague and conclusory to support a retaliation claim. Because Plaintiff has failed to show that Defendant Nevins took adverse action and acted with a retaliatory motive, Plaintiff's retaliation claim will be dismissed.

2. Handling of Grievances

The Court has also construed Plaintiff's complaint to assert claims against Defendant Nevins premised upon his handling of Plaintiff's grievances. The Court notes, however, that Plaintiff has no due process right to file a prison grievance. The courts repeatedly have held that there exists no constitutionally protected due process right to an effective prison grievance procedure. See Hewitt v. Helms, 459 U.S. 460, 467 (1983); Walker v. Mich. Dep't of Corr., 128 F. App'x 441, 445 (6th Cir. 2005); Argue v. Hofmeyer, 80 F. App'x 427, 430 (6th Cir. 2003); Young v. Gundy, 30 F. App'x 568, 569–70 (6th Cir. 2002); Carpenter v. Wilkinson, No. 99-3562, 2000 WL 190054, at *2 (6th Cir. Feb. 7, 2000); see also Antonelli v. Sheahan, 81 F.3d 1422, 1430 (7th Cir. 1996); Adams v. Rice, 40 F.3d 72, 75 (4th Cir. 1994) (collecting cases). Michigan law does not create a liberty interest in the grievance procedure. See Olim v. Wakinekona, 461 U.S. 238, 249 (1983); Keenan v. Marker, 23 F. App'x 405, 407 (6th Cir. 2001); Wynn v. Wolf, No. 93-2411, 1994 WL 105907, at *1 (6th Cir. Mar. 28, 1994). Because Plaintiff has no liberty interest in the grievance process, Defendant Nevins's conduct did not deprive him of due process.

Moreover, Defendant Nevins’s denial of Plaintiff’s grievance did not violate his First Amendment right to petition the government. The First Amendment “right to petition the government does not guarantee a response to the petition or the right to compel government officials to act on or adopt a citizen’s views.” Apple v. Glenn, 183 F.3d 477, 479 (6th Cir. 1999); see also Minnesota State Bd. for Cmty. Colls. v. Knight, 465 U.S. 271, 285 (1984) (holding the right to petition protects only the right to address government; the government may refuse to listen or respond).

Finally, Defendant Nevins’s actions (or inactions) have not barred Plaintiff from seeking a remedy for his complaints. See Cruz v. Beto, 405 U.S. 319, 321 (1972). “A prisoner’s constitutional right to assert grievances typically is not violated when prison officials prohibit only ‘one of several ways in which inmates may voice their complaints to, and seek relief, from prison officials’ while leaving a formal grievance procedure intact.” Griffin v. Berghuis, 563 F. App’x 411, 415–16 (6th Cir. 2014) (citing Jones v. N.C. Prisoners’ Labor Union, Inc., 433 U.S. 119, 130 n.6 (1977)). Indeed, Plaintiff’s ability to seek redress is underscored by his pro se invocation of the judicial process. See Azeez v. DeRobertis, 568 F. Supp. 8, 10 (N.D. Ill. 1982). Even if Plaintiff had been prevented from filing a grievance improperly, his right of access to the courts to petition for redress of his grievances (i.e., by filing a lawsuit) cannot be compromised by his inability to file institutional grievances, and he therefore cannot demonstrate the actual injury required for an access-to-the-courts claim. See, e.g., Lewis v. Casey, 518 U.S. 343, 355 (1996) (requiring actual injury); Bounds v. Smith, 430 U.S. 817, 821–24 (1977). The exhaustion requirement only mandates exhaustion of available administrative remedies. See 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(a). If Plaintiff were improperly denied access to the grievance process, the process would be rendered unavailable, and exhaustion would not be a prerequisite for initiation of a civil rights action. See Ross v. Blake, 578

U.S. 632, 640–44 (2016) (reiterating that, if the prisoner is barred from pursuing a remedy by policy or by the interference of officials, the grievance process is not available, and exhaustion is not required); Kennedy v. Tallio, 20 F. App’x 469, 470–71 (6th Cir. 2001).

In light of the foregoing, the Court finds that Plaintiff has failed to state a cognizable claim against Defendant Nevins, and those claims will be dismissed.

B. Eighth Amendment Excessive Force Claim against Defendant Morrow

Next, Plaintiff suggests that Defendant Morrow used excessive force against him, in violation of the Eighth Amendment, by shutting Plaintiff’s hand in the cell door. (Compl., ECF No. 1, PageID.6.)

The Eighth Amendment embodies a constitutional limitation on the power of the states to punish those convicted of a crime. Punishment may not be “barbarous,” nor may it contravene society’s “evolving standards of decency.” See Rhodes v. Chapman, 452 U.S. 337, 345–46 (1981) (quoting Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 101 (1958)). The Eighth Amendment also prohibits conditions of confinement which, although not physically barbarous, “involve the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain.” Id. at 346 (quoting Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 183 (1976)). Among unnecessary and wanton inflictions of pain are those that are “totally without penological justification.” Id.

Not every shove or restraint, however, gives rise to a constitutional violation. Parrish v. Johnson, 800 F.2d 600, 604 (6th Cir. 1986); see also Hudson v. McMillian, 503 U.S. 1, 9 (1992) (holding that “[n]ot every push or shove . . . violates a prisoner’s constitutional rights” (citation omitted)). On occasion, “[t]he maintenance of prison security and discipline may require that inmates be subjected to physical contact actionable as assault under common law.” Combs v. Wilkinson, 315 F.3d 548, 556 (6th Cir. 2002) (citing Pelfrey v. Chambers, 43 F.3d 1034, 1037 (6th Cir. 1995)). Prison officials nonetheless violate the Eighth Amendment when their “offending conduct reflects an unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain.” Williams v. Curtin, 631 F.3d 380, 383 (6th Cir. 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted); Bailey v. Golladay, 421 F. App’x 579, 582 (6th Cir. 2011).

There is an objective component and a subjective component to an Eighth Amendment claim. Santiago v. Ringle, 734 F.3d 585, 590 (6th Cir. 2013) (citing Comstock v. McCrary, 273 F.3d 693, 702 (6th Cir. 2001)). First, “[t]he subjective component focuses on the state of mind of the prison officials.” Williams, 631 F.3d at 383. The Court asks “whether force was applied in a good-faith effort to maintain or restore discipline, or maliciously and sadistically to cause harm.” Hudson, 503 U.S. at 7. Second, “[t]he objective component requires the pain inflicted to be ‘sufficiently serious.’” Williams, 631 F.3d at 383 (quoting Wilson v. Seiter, 501 U.S. 294, 298 (1991)). “The Eighth Amendment’s prohibition of ‘cruel and unusual’ punishments necessarily excludes from constitutional recognition de minimis uses of physical force, provided that the use of force is not of a sort repugnant to the conscience of mankind.” Hudson, 503 U.S. at 9 (internal quotations omitted). The objective component requires a “contextual” investigation, one that is “responsive to ‘contemporary standards of decency.’” Id. at 8 (quoting Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 103 (1976)). While the extent of a prisoner’s injury may help determine the amount of force used by the prison official, it is not dispositive of whether an Eighth Amendment violation has occurred. Wilkins v. Gaddy, 559 U.S. 34, 37 (2010). “When prison officials maliciously and sadistically use force to cause harm, contemporary standards of decency always are violated . . . [w]hether or not significant injury is evident.” Hudson, 503 U.S. at 9. “Otherwise, the Eighth Amendment would permit any physical punishment, no matter how diabolic or inhuman, inflicting less than some arbitrary quantity of injury.” Id.

While the Court is sympathetic that Plaintiff's hand was shut in the cell door, an injury that was undoubtedly painful, his complaint contains no facts from which the Court could infer that Defendant Morrow acted "maliciously and sadistically to cause harm." Hudson, 503 U.S. at 7. Here, Plaintiff alleges that, after he was released from the door, he told officers that he needed medical attention. (Compl., ECF No. 1, PageID.3.) Plaintiff claims that Defendant Morrow started making comments about how it was Plaintiff's fault because Plaintiff should not have been in the doorway; Plaintiff responded that Defendant Morrow should not have been playing with the doors. (Id.) Despite these comments, Plaintiff has not set forth facts from which the Court could infer that Defendant Morrow was the officer who shut the door on Plaintiff's hand.

In the relief section of the complaint, Plaintiff asserts in a conclusory manner that Defendant Morrow "violated Plaintiff's Eight[h] Amendment rights when he failed to act on his knowledge of a substantial risk of serious harm to Plaintiff;" however, Plaintiff fails to allege facts to support his conclusory assertion that Defendant Morrow knew of a substantial risk of harm to Plaintiff. (Id., PageID.6.) Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that on December 15, 2023, he was on non-bond status, and his cell door opened. (Id., PageID.3.) Plaintiff states that he got up to go see what the unit officer wanted, and he was halfway through the door when it started to close. (Id.) The door then shut on Plaintiff's right and hand fingers before Plaintiff could get all the way into the cell. (Id.) The Court does not minimize Plaintiff's experience; however, Plaintiff alleges insufficient facts to show that Defendant Morrow was the officer who opened and closed the door. (See id.) And regardless of the identity of the officer who opened and shut the door, Plaintiff alleges no facts to suggest that this officer knew that Plaintiff was in the doorway when the door was shutting, let alone that the officer did this intentionally to Plaintiff. (See id.)

Moreover, although Defendant Morrow’s comment to Plaintiff following the incident may not have been professional, the Court cannot infer any malicious and sadistic intent to cause harm from that comment. (See id.) The facts Plaintiff alleges suggest that Defendant Morrow, at most, acted negligently if he was the one who shut the door on Plaintiff’s hand. Allegations of negligence, however, fall short of the deliberate indifference standard required to state an Eighth Amendment claim. See Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 835 (1994); see also Rhodes v. Michigan, 10 F.4th 665, 678 (6th Cir. 2021) (noting that Supreme Court precedent “is clear that the deliberate-indifference standard demarcates accidents and ordinary injuries from actionable conduct in the Eighth Amendment context”). For these reasons, Plaintiff’s Eighth Amendment excessive force claim against Defendant Morrow will be dismissed.

C. Eighth Amendment Deliberate Indifference Claim against Unknown Medical Provider

The Eighth Amendment prohibits the infliction of cruel and unusual punishment against those convicted of crimes. U.S. Const. amend. VIII. The Eighth Amendment obligates prison authorities to provide medical care to incarcerated individuals, as a failure to provide medical care would be inconsistent with contemporary standards of decency. Estelle, 429 U.S. at 103–04. The Eighth Amendment is violated when a prison official is deliberately indifferent to the serious medical needs of a prisoner. Id. at 104–05; Comstock v. McCrary, 273 F.3d 693, 702 (6th Cir. 2001). Deliberate indifference may be manifested by a doctor’s failure to respond to the medical needs of a prisoner, or by “prison guards in intentionally denying or delaying access to medical care or intentionally interfering with the treatment once prescribed. Regardless of how evidenced, deliberate indifference to a prisoner’s serious illness or injury states a cause of action under § 1983.” Estelle, 429 U.S. at 104–05.

A claim for the deprivation of adequate medical care has an objective and a subjective component. Farmer, 511 U.S. at 834. To satisfy the objective component, the plaintiff must allege that the medical need at issue is sufficiently serious. Id. In other words, the inmate must show that he is incarcerated under conditions posing a substantial risk of serious harm. Id. The objective component of the adequate medical care test is satisfied “[w]here the seriousness of a prisoner’s need[] for medical care is obvious even to a lay person.” Blackmore v. Kalamazoo Cnty., 390 F.3d 890, 899 (6th Cir. 2004); see also Phillips v. Roane Cnty., 534 F.3d 531, 539–40 (6th Cir. 2008). Obviousness, however, is not strictly limited to what is detectable to the eye. Even if the layman cannot see the medical need, a condition may be obviously medically serious where a layman, if informed of the true medical situation, would deem the need for medical attention clear. See, e.g., Rouster v. Saginaw Cnty., 749 F.3d 437, 446–51 (6th Cir. 2014) (holding that a prisoner who died from a perforated duodenum exhibited an “objectively serious need for medical treatment,” even though his symptoms appeared to the medical staff at the time to be consistent with alcohol withdrawal); Johnson v. Karnes, 398 F.3d 868, 874 (6th Cir. 2005) (holding that prisoner’s severed tendon was a “quite obvious” medical need, since “any lay person would realize to be serious,” even though the condition was not visually obvious). If the plaintiff’s claim, however, is based on “the prison’s failure to treat a condition adequately, or where the prisoner’s affliction is seemingly minor or non-obvious,” Blackmore, 390 F.3d at 898, the plaintiff must “place verifying medical evidence in the record to establish the detrimental effect of the delay in medical treatment,” Napier v. Madison Cnty., 238 F.3d 739, 742 (6th Cir. 2001) (internal quotation marks omitted), abrogation on other grounds recognized by Lawler as Next Friend of Lawler v. Hardeman Cty., Tenn., __ F.4th __, 2024 WL 656912, *5-6 (6th Cir. Feb. 16, 2024).

The subjective component requires an inmate to show that prison officials have “a sufficiently culpable state of mind” in denying medical care. Brown v. Bargery, 207 F.3d 863, 867 (6th Cir. 2000). Deliberate indifference “entails something more than mere negligence,” but can be “satisfied by something less than acts or omissions for the very purpose of causing harm or with knowledge that harm will result.” Farmer, 511 U.S. at 835. “[T]he official must both be aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm exists, and he must also draw the inference.” Id. at 837. To prove a defendant’s subjective knowledge, “[a] plaintiff may rely on circumstantial evidence . . . : A jury is entitled to ‘conclude that a prison official knew of a substantial risk from the very fact that the risk was obvious.’” Rhinehart v. Scutt, 894 F.3d 721, 738 (6th Cir. 2018) (quoting Farmer, 511 U.S. at 842).

Not every claim by a prisoner that he has received inadequate medical treatment states a violation of the Eighth Amendment. Estelle, 429 U.S. at 105. As the Supreme Court explained:

[A]n inadvertent failure to provide adequate medical care cannot be said to constitute an unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain or to be repugnant to the conscience of mankind. Thus, a complaint that a physician has been negligent in diagnosing or treating a medical condition does not state a valid claim of medical mistreatment under the Eighth Amendment. Medical malpractice does not become a constitutional violation merely because the victim is a prisoner. In order to state a cognizable claim, a prisoner must allege acts or omissions sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious medical needs.

Id. at 105–06 (quotations omitted). Thus, differences in judgment between an inmate and prison medical personnel regarding the appropriate medical diagnoses or treatment are not enough to state a deliberate indifference claim. Darrah v. Krisher, 865 F.3d 361, 372 (6th Cir. 2017); Briggs v. Westcomb, 801 F. App’x 956, 959 (6th Cir. 2020); Mitchell v. Hininger, 553 F. App’x 602, 605 (2014). This is so even if the misdiagnosis results in an inadequate course of treatment and considerable suffering. Gabehart v. Chapleau, No. 96-5050, 1997 WL 160322, at *2 (6th Cir. Apr. 4, 1997).

The Sixth Circuit distinguishes “between cases where the complaint alleges a complete denial of medical care and those cases where the claim is that a prisoner received inadequate medical treatment.” Westlake v. Lucas, 537 F.2d 857, 860 n.5 (6th Cir. 1976). If “a prisoner has received some medical attention and the dispute is over the adequacy of the treatment, federal courts are generally reluctant to second guess medical judgments and to constitutionalize claims which sound in state tort law.” Id.; see also Rouster, 749 F.3d at 448; Perez v. Oakland Cnty., 466 F.3d 416, 434 (6th Cir. 2006); Kellerman v. Simpson, 258 F. App’x 720, 727 (6th Cir. 2007); McFarland v. Austin, 196 F. App’x 410 (6th Cir. 2006); Edmonds v. Horton, 113 F. App’x 62, 65 (6th Cir. 2004); Brock v. Crall, 8 F. App’x 439, 440–41 (6th Cir. 2001); Berryman v. Rieger, 150 F.3d 561, 566 (6th Cir. 1998). “Where the claimant received treatment for his condition, as here, he must show that his treatment was ‘so woefully inadequate as to amount to no treatment at all.’” Mitchell, 553 F. App’x at 604-05 (quoting Alsbaugh v. McConnell, 643 F.3d 162, 169 (6th Cir. 2011)). He must demonstrate that the care he received was “so grossly incompetent, inadequate, or excessive as to shock the conscience or to be intolerable to fundamental fairness.” See Miller v. Calhoun Cnty., 408 F.3d 803, 819 (6th Cir. 2005) (quoting Waldrop v. Evans, 871 F.2d 1030, 1033 (11th Cir. 1989)).

Given Plaintiff’s allegations concerning the state of his hand after it was shut in the door, the Court finds that he has adequately alleged facts suggesting a sufficiently serious medical need. Plaintiff, however, has failed to allege sufficient facts for purposes of the subjective prong of his Eighth Amendment claim. As an initial matter, Plaintiff has only named one unknown medical provider as a Defendant. Plaintiff’s complaint, however, suggests that he saw more than one provider after the December 15, 2023, incident. In the body of Plaintiff’s complaint, he refers to the providers as “medical staff,” “they” and “the nurse,” and Plaintiff does not identify any of these providers as Defendant Unknown Medical Provider. “Summary reference to a single, [multi]-headed ‘Defendants’ does not support a reasonable inference that each Defendant is liable” for the events described in the amended complaint. See Boxill v. O’Grady, 935 F.3d 510, 518 (6th Cir. 2019) (citing Heyne v. Metro. Nashville Pub. Sch., 655 F.3d 556, 564 (6th Cir. 2011)) (“This Court has consistently held that damage claims against government officials arising from alleged violations of constitutional rights must allege, with particularity, facts that demonstrate what each defendant did to violate the asserted constitutional right.” (quoting Lanman v. Hinson, 529 F.3d 673, 684 (6th Cir. 2008))).

Moreover, this is not a case where Plaintiff did not receive any treatment after his hand was shut in the cell door on December 15, 2023. Instead, Plaintiff’s complaint suggests that he was seen right away. On the same day as the incident, medical staff fitted Plaintiff with a splint for his hand and arm, gave him Tylenol, and provided an ice detail. (Compl., ECF No. 1, PageID.3.) About a week and a half later, Plaintiff was called back to the medical department for an X-ray, which did not show any fracture or break. (Id., PageID.4.) A couple weeks after the X-ray, medical staff replaced the splint with an ace bandage and gave Plaintiff more Tylenol. (Id.)

Plaintiff was seen again a few weeks after that. (Id.) The nurse who saw Plaintiff said that she would try to get another X-ray because “swelling can sometimes hide fractures.” (Id., PageID.4–5.) Plaintiff contends, however, that to this day, “nothing has been done further about [his] hand.” (Id.) To the extent Plaintiff faults the unknown medical provider for failing to provide a second X-ray, “the question whether an X-ray or additional diagnostic techniques or forms of treatment is indicated is a classic example of a matter for medical judgment. A medical decision not to order an X-ray, or like measures, does not represent cruel and unusual punishment.” See Estelle, 429 U.S. at 107. Moreover, given that the incident occurred just a little over two months ago, it is not implausible that Plaintiff may simply be on a waiting list to receive a second X-ray.

Plaintiff twice states that he should be taken to see a neurologist or an outside doctor. However, “a desire for additional or different treatment does not suffice by itself to support an Eighth Amendment claim.” Mitchell, 553 F. App’x at 605. As set forth above, it is clear from Plaintiff’s allegations that he received medical treatment for his hand on numerous occasions since December 15, 2023. While it is clear from Plaintiff’s complaint that he disagrees with the treatment provided, “a patient’s disagreement with his physicians over the proper course of treatment alleges, at most, a medical-malpractice claim, which is not cognizable under § 1983.” Darrah, 865 F.3d at 372 (citations omitted). Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above, Plaintiff’s Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference claim against the unknown medical provider will be dismissed as well.

Conclusion

Having conducted the review required by the Prison Litigation Reform Act, the Court determines that Plaintiff’s complaint will be dismissed for failure to state a claim, under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915(e)(2) and 1915A(b), and 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c).

The Court must next decide whether an appeal of this action would be in good faith within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3). See McGore v. Wrigglesworth, 114 F.3d 601, 611 (6th Cir. 1997). Although the Court concludes that Plaintiff’s claims are properly dismissed, the Court does not conclude that any issue Plaintiff might raise on appeal would be frivolous. Coppedge v. United States, 369 U.S. 438, 445 (1962). Accordingly, the Court does not certify that an appeal would not be taken in good faith. Should Plaintiff appeal this decision, the Court will assess the $605.00 appellate filing fee pursuant to Section 1915(b)(1), see McGore, 114 F.3d at 610–11, unless Plaintiff is barred from proceeding in forma pauperis, e.g., by the “three-strikes” rule of Section 1915(g). If he is barred, he will be required to pay the $605.00 appellate filing fee in one lump sum.

This is a dismissal as described by 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g).

A judgment consistent with this opinion will be entered.
